Tualatin High School FBLA (Future Business Leaders of America) kicked off their Dimes initiative, which raises money for the premature babies and research about babies at the Doernbecher Hospital. In order to raise money, members sell paper the rest of the community. Members also volunteered at a few of the local pumpkin farms, Ryser Farms and Lee Farms, to ask pumpkin patch goers to donate to the cause. FBLA chapter, being one of the largest clubs at both Tualatin High School and in Oregon raises more money for the organization than any other chapter in the state. The event went through November 22 and Tualatin FBLA made over $700.

Also in October, FBLA members volunteered at the Regatta Run, which is held in Cpl. Matthew Lembke, and raises money for scholarships for Tualatin High School. Members arrived to the location of the start of the race around 6:20 a.m. to construct a balloon arch that marked the finish line of the race. It was a great opportunity for bonding, as well as volunteering for a local cause, of which the benefits would be students themselves.

All in all, Tualatin FBLA is off to an exciting start, already having some significant service achievements under their belt. Their efforts have been initiated by Noler at Tualatin High School, and the 2018 FBLA Community Service Officer, who reminds members to go above and beyond. They are working hard for some great causes.”
